Reclaiming the Wesleyan Social Witness: Offering Christ by L. Faye Short and Kathryn D. Kiser explores the roots of the Wesleyan tradition and traces Methodism's fusion of gospel proclamation and social witness. The book concludes that the proclamation of the gospel of Jesus Christ is the cornerstone from which all lasting, transformative social justice must flow. Short and Kiser maintain that for modern Methodism to experience reform and revitalization—leading to growth in numbers and influence—its members need to become reacquainted with the theology and teaching of the movement's founder, John Wesley. Endorsed by two United Methodist Bishops and two notable clergy persons, this book, which includes chapter questions, will make a worthy study guide for individuals and small groups.
